The Little Green Bug.

T. C. Robinson, one of the prominent and close observing farmers of Clark county, reports that the little green bug, which has made such ravages in the wheat fields of the western states has made its appearance in the wheat fields of Clark county.

Mr. Robinson is exhibiting a specimen of the bug, and states that in some of the fields, the ground is literally covered with these little green bugs.

Unit Bill Upheld.

The act of March, 1906, making the county and unit in elections as to the sale of liquor was upheld by the Court of Appeals Friday in consolidated cases from the lower courts of Woodford, Lincoln and Henry counties. Chief Justice O'Rear delivering the opinion of the court. It is held that cities of the first four classes, which are entitled under the act to separate elections if they so desire, must ask and have their elections held on the same day as a county election on the question is held in order to hold their rights and not be governed by the larger unit.

Don't think that because we make a specialty of Fine Fresh Meats and Fish that is all we sell. We at all times have all kinds of fresh fruits and green vegetables. Both phones.

An Ex-Bourbon Wins Law Suit.

In the suit of C. L. Sallee, executor of George S. Rosser, against John W. Boulden, trustee, and others, in the Mason Circuit Court, Judge Harbeson decided for the defendants Friday and dismissed the plaintiff's petition.

The suit involved government bonds amounting to two thousand dollars, which were placed by Mr. Rosser, a short time prior to his death, in care of Mr. Boulden, with directions to deliver them after his (Mr. Rosser's) death as follows:

One bond of $1,000 to M. E. McKellup and D. N. Peebles, one of $500 to DeKalb Lodge, I. O. O. F., and one of $500 to Mrs. Fannie Wilkinson of Kirksville, Missouri.

Mr. Sallee, as executor, brought suit to recover possession of these bonds, alleging that at the time they were given to Mr. Boulden, Mr. Rosser did not possess testamentary capacity and was susceptible to the influence of designing persons.

The court's opinion is that Mr. Rosser had testamentary capacity and was not unduly influenced and the parties above named, for whom he placed the bonds with Mr. Boulden, are entitled to same and to recover costs of the suit.

Fish! Fish! Fish!

The reason we always have fresh fish is because we sell three times as many as other people and have a standing order for the fresh fish every day. Remember we clean them free of charge.

A Happy Idea.

"Kentucky has a reproduction of the Daniel Boone fort as her State building. What a happy idea! The building was pointed out to me this morning; a happy idea indeed."

President Roosevelt gave this utterance with characteristic enthusiasm Friday when Charles E. Hoge, Vice President of the Kentucky Commission to the Jamestown Exposition introduced to him. Kentucky maintained a proud place in the ceremonies attending the Ter-Centennial inaugural. The only State in the list of twenty-eight represented at the World's Fair, which has come without the aid of Legislative appropriations, Kentucky was nearer in readiness than all, except two or three of her sister States. Her main buildings are complete and all of the blockhouses are under roof.

World's Sunday School Day.

To Sunday School Workers Throughout the World: Christian Greeting:

The Executive Committee of the World's Fifth Sunday School Convention, American Section, invites Sunday School workers in all lands to unite in observing Sunday, May 19, 1907, as World's Sunday School Day by engaging in private and public prayer as occasion may offer for Sunday Schools throughout the world, and especially for the World's Fifth Sunday School Convention, which will then be in session in the city of Rome.

Ministers are asked to preach a special sermon, placing fresh emphasis upon the Sunday school as a most promising field for Evangelization and character building.

A universal compliance with this suggestion will make this the greatest day in the history of the Sunday School. Not all may go to Rome, but each one may have a share in promoting the cause which the Convention represents.

By direction of the Committee, GEO. W. BAILEY, Chairman, WM. N. HARTSHORN, Sec'y. Philadelphia, March 1, 1907.

The above call is an exceedingly important one and the State Executive Committee is anxious to have it generally observed throughout the State. A special order of services for the day has been prepared and can be secured from Sunday School Times, Philadelphia, for $1.50 per hundred.
E. A. FOX, General Secretary.

Brothers Reunited.

After a separation of 35 years, Col. Theodore C. Polk, of Denver, and Col. W. H. Polk, of Lexington, brothers, met in the latter city the other day. The brothers enlisted during the civil war, Col. T. C. Polk in the confederate army and Col. W. H. Polk in the federal army. After the war Col. T. C. Polk drifted west, where he has been engaged in business. The latter was postmaster in this city under Grant's administration.

Consolidation Not Even Considered.

[Courier-Journal.]

J. C. Monteith, vice-president of the Central Home Telephone Company, said yesterday that there was absolutely no truth in the report that a deal was on whereby the Bell Telephone Company had acquired or would acquire the independent telephone interests in Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, and Southern Indiana. This report was published several days ago that such a deal was on and that it was likely that the independent and Cumberland companies of this city would be consolidated. Mr. Monteith said that there was absolutely no truth in the report and that there was no foundation whatever upon which to base such a report.

"No negotiations of any kind have been entered into," said Mr. Monteith. "The report that such a deal was on doubtless originated from some uninformed person, who, hearing that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company had sold $40,000,000 of its bonds recently, did not know that the bulk of that sale was necessary for the payment of notes issued two years ago by that company and payable May 1."

The statement, which originated in New York, is preposterous on its face for the reason that it would be impossible to acquire the independent interests in such a short time even, if it were contemplated. Moreover, it is not likely that Frederick P. Fish would have consummated any such deal upon the eve of his retirement from office May 1, he having resigned as president, director and member of the Executive Committee of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He was succeeded by Theodore M. Vail.

"The whole story is a fabrication from beginning to end," continued Mr. Monteith, "as far as the independent interest in the territory mentioned is concerned. However, the Central Union Telephone Company, the Bell Company operating in Indiana, has offered to withdraw all of its local exchanges from that State, excepting possibly Indianapolis, provided the independent telephone exchanges throughout the State would permit the Bell Company to connect their wires with the independent exchanges and give them just such long distance business as could not be handled by the independent exchanges for points that the independents do not now reach, such as New York, Boston, Denver and New Orleans."

Mr. Monteith added that this proposition had never received favorable consideration from the independents.

Impressive Services at Christian Church.

Elder Carey E. Morgan preached Sunday morning to a congregation that taxed the seating capacity at the Christian church. He took for his theme "The Riches of Christ." After a most earnest and excellent sermon by this man of God, he extended the gospel invitation and the following persons went forward and united with the church: Misses Daisy Farris, Gertrude Welch, and Ruth and Lillian Austin by confession, and Mrs. Josephine Bramblett, Mrs. Jack Moore and Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Darnaby by letter.

After the service the young men of the church, by invitation, repaired to the Sunday school annex, where Elder Morgan briefly outlined a course of social and religious work to be taken up and made a permanent feature.

The following committee was appointed to consider the form of organization: Bennett Thomas, Monroe Mansfield, Ellis Hayden, W. O. Hinton and Bishop Hibler.

At the evening service another large congregation greeted the popular pastor, who took for his text "The Way of the Cross." Mrs. Nannie Barnes, Mrs. Sallie Adams and Miss Lola Gray united with the church at this service.

BOURBON FISCAL COURT MEETS

Six Charges Brought Against Turnpike Supervisor Redmon By the County Attorney.

The Bourbon Fiscal Court met in its regular monthly session Saturday. Every member of the Court was present, with County Judge Denis Dundon presiding. The only matter of importance was the filing of a motion by County Attorney T. E. Moore, Jr., in an effort to carry out his declaration made some time ago that all contracts made for the expenditure of the public funds must be done according to the strict letter of the law. The motion is as follows:

T. E. Moore, Jr., as County Attorney, vs. C. F. Redmon, Turnpike Supervisor.

T. E. Moore, Jr., County Attorney of Bourbon County moves the Bourbon Fiscal Court to remove C. F. Redmon, Turnpike Supervisor of Bourbon County for the following reasons and grounds.

First—Because the said C. F. Redmon as Turnpike Supervisor for said county failed and refused to let out the turnpikes of Bourbon county to the lowest and best bidder at the court house door on court day in March, 1907, as ordered by the Bourbon Fiscal Court as its meeting held on the day of Feb. 1907, after having previously advertised all of said turnpikes in said county to be so let for more than twenty days prior to said court day.

Second—Because said Turnpike Supervisor has attempted to let out private contract a very large number of said turnpikes, when said turnpikes had not, prior to said court day to wit: March 4, 1907, been reserved by said Turnpike Supervisor by and with the consent of the County Judge to be let at private contract.

Third—Because the said Turnpike Supervisor has let at private contract the Millersburg and Cynthiana turnpike to W. B. Linville at $7.75 per rod when P. S. See had bid to do said work, prior to the letting and before the making of said contract with said Linville for $7.50 per rod.

Fourth—Because said Supervisor let at private contract to said W. B. Linville the Millersburg and Cane Ridge turnpike at $7.75 per rod when P. S. See had bid to do said work at $7.50 per rod which bid and offer was made prior to the making of said contract with said Linville.

Fifth—Because said Turnpike Supervisor let to Mote Rankin the Ardery Pike at $8.00 per rod at private contract when P. S. See had bid to do said work prior to the making of said contract at $7.00 per rod.

Sixth—Because said C. F. Redmon let to Long Brothers the Redmon turnpike at $8.00 per rod at private contract when said See had bid to do said work prior to the making of said contract at $7.00 per rod.

The court then proceeded to the consideration of routine business, allowing the following claims for the loss of sheep killed by dogs which were ordered certified to the Auditor of Public Accounts: W. M. Rogers, $22; G. W. Gilkey, $54; B. F. Skillman, $10; R. H. Burris, $12.50; Lloyd Ashurst, $101, and Mrs. A. L. Shackelford, $130.

Claims against the county to the amount of $966.39 were approved and ordered paid.

The following orders were entered of record: That the report of the committee appointed to audit the report of Hon. C. M. Thomas, the retiring County Treasurer and treasurer of the Garth Fund, be received and spread upon the record. The committee, was composed of Esquires Claybrook and Anderson, their report stating that the records of the retiring Treasurer were correct to a cent and ordering the discharge of both the Treasurer and his bondsmen from further liability.

The report of Turnpike Supervisor C. F. Redmon was read and approved. It was ordered that he be and is hereby ordered to accept the bid of P. S. See for the building of abutments on the Millersburg and Cynthiana pike near Talbott Bros.' at $3.00 per perch, rock to be laid dry; that Thomasson and Keller be and are hereby appointed a committee to examine and report the feasibility of macadamizing the Wyatt dirt road for a distance of one and one-quarter miles.

Judge Dundon was appointed a committee to purchase a safe for the use of the Sheriff's office.

Robert F. Adair Dead.

Mr. Robert F. Adair, aged 74 years, died Saturday night at his home, near town, at 10:30 o'clock, of rheumatism. He had been a sufferer with this disease for several years, which took an acute stage in the last few days.

Mr. Adair had been a prominent farmer in this county for nearly fifty years, and was highly respected by a large circle of friends. He passed away surrounded by a devoted wife and seven children. He had during life been a devoted husband and loving and indulgent father.

The funeral service took place from the residence yesterday afternoon at 3:30. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. E. H. Rutherford, assisted by the Rev. George W. Clark, the interment at Paris cemetery. The pall-bearers were: A. P. Adair, Charles Adair, Robert Goggin, John Adair, Dr. C. J. Clark, Judge Denis Dundon, E. P. Clarke and Albert Adair.

The Salary Grab.

When the increase of the salaries of Congressmen from $5,000 to $7,500 was voted upon in the house of Representatives last winter the proposition was defeated by 188 yeas to 106 nays, and yet the increase was eventually agreed to through the connivance of the Republican Speaker and Republican majority. This was accomplished by refusing to second the demand for a roll call when there was another opportunity to press the increase proposition, so it was adopted without putting the members on record who favored or opposed it. The vote on the legislative appropriation bill in December last is therefore the only test of how the members voted. The Senate was more open and above board and a roll call disclosed 21 Senators voting against the increase and fifty-three for it.

It was expected that when this fifty per cent. increase in salary was voted that the 20 cents mileage for each mile traveled going to and returning from each session of Congress would be modified to the actual expense of the trip. This graft, however, is still collected and amounts to $1,300 for the members from the Pacific states and others in proportion to the distance traveled which is all out of reason with the actual expenses, which do not exceed twenty per cent. of the amount paid by the government.

After July 1, Congressmen will get $125 a month as the salary for their clerks and as many members do not employ any regular clerk, to such this amount can be mostly added to their salaries. There are, however, some members who employ two clerks, and expend more for clerk hire than they receive. There is also another perquisite of Congressional office which is rarely expended, as the official letter heads and envelopes furnished free of each member of a committee and the traveling privilege cover most of such expense. Then the government furnishes the large Manila envelopes that are used for mailing speeches and does the work of enclosing and sealing them free of charge, the member only paying for printing the speeches.

Some members of Congress have been known to save all their salaries and W. F. Tyndall who was retired at the last election as the member from the Fourteenth District of Missouri, boasted, before leaving Washington, that he had saved his entire salary of $10,000. He acted as his own clerk and was enabled to live in Washington on the money which he drew under his clerk hire and stationery allowances.

A Corporation Transformation.

The great trouble without enormous incorporated wealth is that those who control the corporations run great fortunes while the people who own the stock and bonds only receive an average quite meagre interest. As the people are bled to fill the purses of the industrial oligarchy the question is how to fairly inaugurate an industrial democracy by removing the causes that have built up and fostered our industrial oligarchy. All special privileges, such as protecting the trusts by the tariff, must be abolished and the reconstructed railroad corporations must be so controlled that the public whose money has created them and whose patronage supports them will have equal rights with those who manage them.

What A Thought.

The Los Angeles Times says: "John D. Rockefeller will pass down into history as in many respects as one of the greatest and most typical of all Americans." The richest man in all the world—grown rich through the lawlessness of his business transactions—a man who but a few months ago was hiding and engaged in successful effort to avoid the officers of the law, bearing writs commanding him to appear in a court of justice and tell the truth!"

Yet this man, in the opinion of General Harrison Gray Otis, "will pass down into history as in many respects one of the greatest and most typical of all Americans!"

A typical American, indeed! What a thought for a gray haired man to seek to impress upon the rising generation!

Does your whisky taste any purer since Secretary Bonaparte described officially what is good, better and best?

Political Pick-Ups.

Rockefeller's imported minister wants business on heavenly basis, but does not say anything about restitution for past business corruption, so that a fair start can be made on the new track.

Democratic efforts from now on should be to get together and "sic" on the Republican to keep asunder.

So far no Federal office-holder has exhibited enough political independence to declare against President Roosevelt for a third term, or for the candidate he selects. In fact all the federal officials heard from are working like beavers to control the next Republican national convention in the interest of the Administration.

Great Britain has just disposed of six battleships and cruisers at bargain prices being about five per cent. of their cost. The modern warship is expensive to build, expensive to keep, in commission, and worth comparatively nothing after a few years.

The reactionaries in Russia are calling for a dictator and the reactionaries in the United States are calling for some one to supersede the dictator who is troubling them.

Senator Penrose snooked around the White House offices some days before he beared the lion in his den and a good many people were disappointed that he did not have to seek his exit by the fire escape.

How quiet the Administration is about that $173,000 lost from the sub-treasury at Chicago and the amount stolen from the sub-treasury at St. Louis. The officials selected by this reform Administration seem to be more dishonest than former ones were partisans of the deepest Republican dye.

There seems to be strong suspicion in the minds of many Republicans that President Roosevelt is maneuvering for a third term. The Chicago Tribune, which has been a strong Roosevelt organ, declares against the nomination of the President and virtually says it would bolt if such were made, and that stalwart Republican organ, the Chicago Inter-Ocean, takes every opportunity of finding fault with the Roosevelt doings and sayings.

If the Roosevelt-Taft program should miscarry what a devil of a fix these federal office-holders will be in that they have burned their bridges behind them.

That howling from the political field of Ohio is caused by the ox of the Republican factions being gored and the crowing is being done by the Democratic roosters.

The French Ambassador has complained to the Secretary of the Treasury that over-valuation of French goods imported here is preventing exports from that country and demands the same treatment that is being accorded to Germany. The tariff war against the United States is warming up and the standpatners will have to make concessions, or our foreign trade will greatly suffer.

Treason.

The New York Press is a Republican paper, but it has already incurred the displeasure of the Republican leaders, and will yet be read out of the party unless it reforms, for this is a sample of what the Press is saying these days: "This is not likely—that the Standard Oil Company will be fined $30,000,000 under the conviction at Chicago on 1,463 counts of an indictment for violation of the Elkins anti-rebate law. But suppose the court does inflict the maximum penalty, will any reasoning being believe that the oil monopoly will be destroyed or even seriously injured by the sentence? John D. Rockefeller, who says he is only a small holder of Standard stock, can give away far more than $30,000,000 a year. The Standard Oil company will continue to monopolize the oil business, and to extend its insidious influence into every form of American activity, until the members of the conspiracy in restraint of trade are branded with the mark of the criminal and put under lock and key."

When you consider breeding, individually and the kind of colts he gets, Sunland Bourbon's fee is lower than any stallion we know of. If you want a fine team, a good road horse, a high actor, all having speed, breed your mares to Sunland Bourbon. It is well known he gets the above kind. Don't Whisk Your Hat. Never use a whisk broom to clean a hat, either stiff or soft, particularly a soft hat, as it gradually removes the fine surface originally on the hat. The worst effect, however, is the wearing away of the band and binding by such rough usage. The effect is more quickly shown on the best grades of bands and binding. A fine hair brush, one of curved shape, made especially to use under the curl of the hat, is good. Best of all, however, is a thin piece of woolen cloth. Such pieces are now made in the form of pads, with a strap across the back, so that they can be held securely in the hand.

Eminent Doctors Praise Its Ingredients.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicinal which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhoea; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women, constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhoea (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medicinal properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says: "It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root: "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal: "Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhoea (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

A Very Practical Christian.

A benevolent old man who lived on his farm in Iowa never refused shelter to any who might ask it of him. His many friends remonstrated with him about this characteristic, knowing that many unscrupulous hoboes would avail themselves of the opportunity and that there was great danger of the old man being robbed. To these remonstrances the old man replied that he believed in "practical Christianity."

"But," said one of his friends, "this seems very impractical. Suppose one of these men took it into his head to rob you one night?"

"My dear young friend," was the reply, "I bid all enter in the name of God, but I prove my belief in practical Christianity by locking up their pants during the night."

The Madrigal.

The word madrigal sounds very formidable to a beginner in music. More than once have I heard the question, "What is a madrigal?" Strictly speaking, a madrigal is an elaborate vocal composition in from three to six parts, generally sung in chorus. The melody should not be carried through a single part, but should be dispersed in phrases through the different voices in the conversational manner peculiar to the music of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The true madrigal has no accompaniment. This form of song is considered English, but is thought to have had its origin in the Netherlands. The exact derivation of the word is not known. The first madrigals are believed to have been morning songs, shepherds' lays or songs in praise of the Virgin.—Circle Magazine.

Poll Parrot as a Game Bird.

While the parrot is a bird of beautiful plumage, as a table delicacy it is not to be recommended, as I know from sad experience. My first essay at eating a parrot was attended with modified success. The bird must have been comparatively young, and after several hours' boiling became soft enough to masticate and finally swallow, leaving behind it an impression that we had lunched on the sole of a rubber boot.—Arthur D. Temple in Field and Stream.

The Tip Randolph Wanted.

Most all the available space was taken at both services. The choral work of Miss Phillips chorus class was solos by Miss Belle Taylor Judy and Mr. James B. Cray were excellent. The organ was presided over by Miss Kate Miller and under her magic touch delighted all hearers.

—The following invitation has been received by relatives: "Mr. and Mrs. Hiram S. Wood request the pleasure of your company at the marriage of their daughter, Edith, to Dr. Hamlet S. Garland, on Wednesday, the fifteenth of May, one thousand nine hundred and seven at six-thirty. Oskaloosa, Iowa."

—Dr. Garland is a nephew of Messrs. G. W. Charley, John and Ashby Leer and a graduate of M. M. I. His early life was spent in this community. He has been connected with the medical fraternity of Oskaloosa for the past two years and has won an enviable reputation as a physician and surgeon. They will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Garland, at Vanceburg, and stop here for a few days before their return.

—Mrs. Margaret Ravenscraft, aged 86, died at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. James Arthur, Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, after a lingering illness. Some months ago she was partially paralyzed and since then she has been almost helpless, conscious and able to talk some at times. For the past two months her death has been expected almost daily, but having a wonderful constitution she was able to fight the grim monster until the time named. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. James H. Arthur, of this place, and Mrs. W. R. Gill of Washington, Ky. She moved here with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur, more than twenty years ago, from Mayslick. The funeral took place Monday afternoon from her home at 3:30, services by Rev. H. R. Laird. The remains were taken to Maysville this morning for burial in the family lot by the side of her husband and children.

—The ball game Saturday afternoon between Kentucky State College and Millersburg Military Institute, on the grounds of the former, resulted in a score of 5 to 4 in favor of the institute. The game was exciting from start to finish. The Institute team has won everything they have gone after and when they defeat Georgetown, will stand as the champions of the State among the colleges. All the cadets but two witnessed this thrilling game. They were conveyed to Lexington on a special car. A large number of anxious citizens went with them. At the close of the game Capt. Riley and his famous team attracted more attention than Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. A large crowd was in attendance at the station when the 6:55 train pulled in, the blowing of the whistle blowing time to a well regulated march followed the already known result. The town was turned out to the cadets until 9:15 and there was nothing to good for them. Capt. Riley, the coach, has and is receiving showers of congratulations for the very masterly way he has handled this team. A few months ago they were raw material, some of them having never played a game of ball outside of a country school. They have carried off the honors with Danville and State College, a game with Georgetown puts them in the lead of all college teams.

Opposed To Race Suicide.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hayden, of Daviess county evidently do not believe in race suicide. They have had eight children born to them in the eight years of their married life. The father is thirty-one years old and weighs 125 pounds, while the mother is thirty-nine and weighs 150 pounds. The last born are twins, both girls. Of the children four are boys and four are girls. Among them are three pairs of twins. The first child was a boy, then came the twins, then a girl and then came twins again, both boys. This is a record hard to beat.

Where Do The Flies Go?

He is here again—the first house fly of the season. He has come sailing and buzzing in with as much assurance as if his winter vacation had not lasted more than forty-eight hours. Now, where has the house-fly been all the peaceful weeks and months in which he blessed your nerves with a cessation of his pestiferous attention? He didn't perish or vanish from the earth, for you can easily tell that he is familiar with every spot he touches. He is full grown and full fledged. He was not produced yesterday. No stranger could possibly make himself so much at home as he does today. "The wind bloweth where it listeth and thou hearst the sound thereof, but thou canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth." So it is with the house-fly.

The Limit.

Telephone girls receive many strange calls from patrons of the service. For instance a Paris woman wanted to go shopping the other day and was minus a nurse. She put her baby to sleep in the carriage, put the telephone receiver to its ear, and then notified central to sing to the baby if it got awake and cried.

Some On Economy.

An exchange in a neighboring county, tells the following about a man of an economical turn: "He comes to town with a pair of horses, brings along his own oats, saves barn fare by fastening the team to a tree or fence on the outskirts, and in order not to lose the oats which the animals toss about more or less while feeding he always brings along at least two chickens which he tied near the horses' heads. How is that for economical ingenuity?"

Roads Made Of Rubber.

Several stretches of roadway in London have been made of rubber, and the people in the neighborhood are delighted with it. A whole regiment of horsemen and all the dray wagons in the city can tear at breakneck speed over those rubber roads without in the least disturbing the slumber of the most irritable and nervous resident in the neighborhood. But it costs lots of money to make and keep in repair rubber roadways, and the experiment is not likely to become very generally adopted. Besides, most of the rubber extant is used in necks.

Singular Affliction.

Mrs. Bettie Davis, aged 72, of Carol Hill, Barren county, literally had her head to burst from headache. Last Thursday afternoon she took a severe headache, which lasted all day Friday. The usual remedies failed to give relief, and Friday night a hole like that of a 32 caliber ball burst in her head and the blood ran copiously on the bed and floor. When discovered by relatives it was thought at first she had been shot. The loss of blood seemed to give relief, and since she has suffered no inconvenience from her strange affliction and the wound has been sewed up.

Board Of Control In Session.

The Bourbon County Board of Control of the Society of Equity was in business session at the court house yesterday. Since the day of the Lexington barbecue the Bourbon Board has increased the acreage signed from 3,100 to 3,500. This leaves only 1,000 acres unpooled in Bourbon county. Mr. James E. Clay pooled 90 acres Saturday.

Death Of Edward H. Connell.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Connell and one of Paris' most popular young men. Everybody who knew Ed. Connell liked him. He was quiet and unassuming, and numbered his friends by the hundreds.

The funeral services will take place this (Tuesday) morning, at 9:30 o'clock, at the Catholic church, conducted by Rev. Jas. Cusick.

Probable Fatal Cutting Scrape.

Lew Bishop, a white man who works for a Mr. Craycraft, on the Redmon pike, came to town yesterday and loaded up on bad whisky and started to walk home. He stopped by M. B. Lovell's milking pens near the city limits, and commenced to use profane and abusive language. Several women being present, a young man employed by Mr. Lovell tried to persuade him to desist, when Bishop drew a knife and slashed the young fellow across his side. He then ran down the pike towards his home. Two of Mr. Lovell's young sons followed him for about two miles and finally overtook him, put him under arrest and brought him back to town and turned him over to Jailor George W. Judy. Dr. Faries was called to attend the wounded man, and says the cut reached through a portion of one lung, and may result fatally.

Col. Ewing Passes Away.

Col. Henry Harrison Ewing, of Bath county, died Sunday at 8:25 p. m., of paralysis, with which he was stricken a few days ago. Mr. Ewing was born in Bath county in 1836, and had lived there most of his life. He was one of the best known men in the State, being one of the Commissioners of the Confederate Home at Pewee Valley and having traveled extensively in the South and West. Mr. Ewing came from a prominent Southern family of the Blue Grass country.

When the Civil War began, he joined Colonel Thomas Johnson's battalion, Company F, Kentucky Mounted Rifles and served with distinction throughout the war, being one of the last to surrender, he laying down his arms in Mt. Sterling, May 2, 1865.

By his courage he had risen to the rank of Colonel of his regiment, and was held in great esteem by all the Commanders of the Southern army and by President Davis, of the Confederacy, with whom he was a favorite. After the war Colonel Ewing returned to his home and engaged in managing his extensive blue grass farm and also became prominent as a politician.

Within the past two or three years, he had retired to private life, and took no active part in politics, but gave his entire attention to the management and care of his farm, with which he was very successful.

The deceased was a brother of Mrs. C. C. Beer, of this county, who was at his bedside when he passed away.

A Composite Story

By ALICE LOUISE LEE

Copyright, 1905, by Alice Louise Lee

THE god of friendship had been unusually good to Evalyn Harley and Allen Devon until they tried even the patience of that divinity by undertaking a certain piece of work together.

"Allen is such a relief," Evalyn Harley said numberless times when the door closed behind another caller. "He keeps his head."

"And his heart?" her father would ask, with a sly twinkle in his eyes.
"If he didn't," Evalyn would rejoin,
with dignity, "he would not be a relief!"

When Allen felt particularly bored
he turned his steps toward the park.
"Evalyn never tires a fellow. Evalyn is a trump!" he would mutter.

They spent long evenings discussing themselves and other literary matters, for both had literary tastes. At last there came a day when they determined to test those tastes and write a story together.

That was the work which enraged
the god.

"How is it done?" asked Allen medi-tatively.

He sat before the great open fire in the Harley hall, his eyes following the upward sparks.

"This is my idea," said Evalyn. Evalyn was curled upon a heap of cushions, scarlet and blue, on the other side of the fire. "We will each of us write the whole story, you know, and then we'll compile. We will criticize each other mercilessly and piece together the patches our criticism has left."

They went to work at once. An incident had fallen into their hands. It happened to be an accident. A third party, with whom they were both acquainted, furnished it. It had nearly cost this third person his life, but that only made it more thrilling for them.
They created their hero and heroine.
Of course they agreed. Agreement in tastes and ideas was the basis of their long friendship. They talked over each situation until their mental pictures did not differ by a hair's breadth. Then they parted.

A month later, the 1st of May, Allen boarded the Hoboken ferry with a bulky manuscript in his pocket. He had spent April in New Jersey writing. Allen had never thought more and worked harder in his life.

Evalyn was waiting for him and had been for an hour. With her own hands

"WE WILL EACH OF US WRITE THE WHOLE STORY."

she rearranged curtains and dusted books on which no dust existed. Evalyn was nervous.

A pile of neatly matched papers lay
on the table.

"Well," she said breathlessly when James ushered in Allen.

"Well," he smiled, clasping her outstretched hand.

"You are looking thin, Allen," said
Evalyn, giving him a searching glance.
Allen laughed. "If I look as thin as I feel," drawing out a manuscript and laying it beside hers on the table, "I sympathize with any beholder!"

He sat down on one side of the table, Evalyn on the other. The stories which were to be composited lay between them.

"You read first," she said.

"No, you."

"Oh, no! A lord of creation ought to lead."

"A lord of creation ought to yield,"
returned Allen, with a bow.

"That's the only graceful speech I've ever heard you make. I'll read first just to show my appreciation," laughed Evalyn.

She drew a long breath, steadied her voice and began. Allen listened attentively. It soon became evident that there were some parts of the narrative which he did not like. The story, on the whole, seemed better than his,
with one exception—her hero was not natural. Of course it would be an easy matter to call attention to that because Evalyn would gladly recognize any defects he could point out.

Evalyn read on. Allen dropped his head on his hands thoughtfully.
Strange she should guard against that hero's having any faults.

"This, the end, the close, the period," exclaimed Evalyn, giving the papers a little wave. "Well?" breathlessly turning to Allen.

He aroused himself and looked at her aching face. After all it would be fit to say the nice things first.

"It's rich, Evalyn, and see here! You have the advantage of me. You have pictured your heroine so I can see her—the way she does her hair and her dress and all that. Now, all I could do with her appearance was to wrap a piece of black stuff around her and twist her hair up any old way."

Evalyn's face beamed, and her eyes danced. "Oh, I'm so glad you have not hit the hero! The others I just dashed off, but I tell you I spent days
over the hero."

Allen gave a start of dismay and said nothing.

"How do you like him?" suddenly suspicious of the other's silence.

"I—well—that—is—then in sudden inspiration, "I am glad you parted his hair on one side."

Evalyn flushed slightly and moved uneasily.

Allen took advantage of the momentary confusion which his remark seemed to cause her to say eagerly: "Now, before we go any further with this,
hear mine, and then we can take both up together. But before we go on I want you to promise me something."

"Well?"

"If there is anything in this you don't like I want you to say so at once.
Will you?"

"Why, of course, we agreed on that weeks ago," replied Evalyn in astonishment. "Otherwise we can never get the stories collaborated. Haven't you said just what you think about mine?"

"Oh, yes, so far," glibly. "Perhaps I shall think of other things to say,
though, when mine is torn to tatters.
That's what I want you to do with it," impressively.

He read.

Evalyn did not listen quietly as he had done. She became unaffectedly excited. She nodded and exclaimed and got Allen so enthused that he forgot he was reading his own production, and it began to sound fairly well in his own ears. When he finished two pairs of very bright eyes looked across the table.

Evalyn clapped her hands enthusiastically. "Allen, you have outdone yourself. That is fine. And you have always pretended you could not write conversation. It's the best part of your story."

"Not so good as yours," Allen hastened to interrupt.

"Indeed it is. Now, that third person says much brighter things for you than for me. Otherwise how exactly alike we have made him."

"That comes of our both knowing him and sketching him true to life," Allen began, intent on opening a way for his criticism of her hero. "Don't you think our characters ought to be real people—true to life as we have seen them?"

Evalyn hesitated a little over her reply. "Indeed I do. Now, we were to be frank about the faults as well as the virtues, were we not?"

"Yes, yes," eagerly, "and so I'll be obliged to." Allen checked himself hastily. "Excuse me. You had not finished."

He was so anxious now to have that hero disposed of.

Evalyn hesitated. She tore bits off the corner of her pages.

"Why, yes, I had not much more to say, except—well, I might as well say it so long as I promised to be frank—we promised to be frank," she corrected herself. "Really, Allen, your story outdoes what I believed you capable of doing in every way save your heroine."

"The heroine," said Allen, taken aback. "Why, my heroine?" he paused.

"Your heroine is not a real girl."

Allen stared fixedly across the table.

The light faded from his eyes. He stammered, "My heroine—er—what's the matter with her?"

Evalyn spoke firmly. "She is unnatural from the heart out—"

"Exactly the fault with your hero," Allen interrupted bluntly.

"My hero?" in tones of wonder. "I thought you liked my hero." Evalyn stiffened visibly.

"Oh, no! I said I liked his hair, but the cut of a man's hair doesn't index
his disposition, and it's his disposition that I take exception to. No man on earth ever had his disposition"—here, fortunately, Allen stopped. He hardly knew what he had said because his thoughts were more on his own heroine, whom Evalyn wanted to demolish.

Evalyn had grown very stiff and very cold. Her tone was frigid. "Your heroine is evidently a match for my hero, as those are the very criticisms
I had to offer on her, although," her tone, if possible, was a shade more icy, "I should hardly have offered my remarks in that way."

"What way?" asked Allen, bewildered and not able to recall what he had said.

Evalyn made no reply.

"Really," began Allen, "tell me what I have said to offend you. We were to criticise frankly!"

"But not sarcastically," interrupted Evalyn briefly. She maintained her frigidity to curb the quiver of her lips.

"Forgive me if I have been rude," returned Allen, slightly haughty. "This girl is the only character I care a cent about. How is she unnatural?"

Evalyn swallowed suddenly. "Any girl would have been jealous if a man she loved had treated her in that way—"

"This girl would not be," muttered Allen.

"Of course, if you know," returned Evalyn, "the criticism is out of place.
I must say I have never met such a girl."

There was an uncomfortable pause
and then Allen said quite humbly,
"Evalyn, the truth is the heroine is a real girl."

"A friend of yours?" in a curiously constrained voice.

Allen's manner also was far from restful. He stammered a little.

"Yes."

"I congratulate you on knowing the happy possessor of all the virtues and none of the faults of womankind." Evalyn rose calmly. She consulted her watch. "I have to meet an engagement in half an hour," she continued.

"I am sure you will excuse me."

Allen arose, thoroughly miserable.
"Certainly, I presume we can finish the story some other time," stuffing the manuscript into his pocket as though he wished it might keep on in its downward journey.

Evalyn accompanied him to the hall.
There she paused, her foot on the first step of the stairs, her hand on the railing. James had opened the door for Allen. "By the way, my hero does match your heroine in this—he also is taken from life."

Allen left the house in a gloomy state of mind. He turned his steps toward the park. It was late in the afternoon, but he did not feel hungry. He

"YOU ARE MY HEROINE."

wanted to walk and think. He drew his hat over his eyes and strode along.

That hero a real man! If so, it was only the eyes of love that could see so many virtues and so few faults in him.
This was a bitter thought to Allen.
During his month's exile from the city
he had been startled at a revelation of which he had not previously dreamed.
It was in view of that revelation that this thought was bitter.

So absorbed was he that an hour later he passed a rustic seat on which a girl dressed in gray sat. He saw her without knowing that he saw her. Half an hour later—to judge by his feelings, half a minute, allowing the same privilege to his watch—he aroused himself to the consciousness that it was Evalyn.

He turned and hastily retraced his steps to the rustic seat and stood before her.

She was gazing at the sunset glow
in the fleecy clouds which hung low over the city. The poise of her head said distinctly to the author of that unfortunate heroine, "Please stand out of the light."

Allen responded by standing directly in it.

"The sunset is beautiful," said Eva-
lyn. Her tone had not thawed yet.

"Evalyn, I didn't know you back here," vaguely.

"I spoke of the sunset," distinctly
from Evalyn.

"I was thinking about something very earnestly," Allen went on, taking no notice of either the sunset or her remarks, "and there is something I want to say."

There was a pause.

"Well, I am not speaking," flippantly
from Evalyn.

Allen ignored the flippancy and continued slowly: "My heroine may be at fault, but I don't believe it. You see, I could not write her any differently because I see her that way. Evalyn," turning solemn eyes on her, "you are my heroine."

Evalyn caught her breath and dropped her eyes. Her cheeks for a moment took on the color of the sunset she had been admiring, then they began to dimple.

Suddenly she arose and said gravely:
"Allen, I have something to tell you confidentially. I know I can trust you that it goes no farther."

"Allen looked at her in alarm. Her eyes were on the path, and he could not catch the mischief in them.

"You may trust me," he said briefly,
his voice quite unsteady.

"In that case, then, I don't mind telling you that my hateful hero is no other than—yourself."

Then it was that the wounded god of friendship resigned and the reign of another god began.

He Knew the Grand Secret.

There were many queer characters in Ballantyne's printing house in Edinburgh, and one of them declared that he knew who wrote the Waverley novels, "almost as soon as the master," James Ballantyne.

"I had just begun a new sheet of "Guy Mannering," he would say, "one night awhile after 12, and all the compositors had left, when in comes Mr.
Ballantyne himself, with a letter in his hand and a lot of types.

"I am going to make a small alteration, Sandy," said he. "Unlock the form, will you? I'll not keep you many minutes."

"Well, I did as I was bidden, and Mr. Ballantyne looked at the letter and altered three lines on one page and one line on another.

"That will do now, Sandy. I think,"
were his words, and off he went, never thinking he had left the letter lying on my bank. I had barely time to get a glimpse of it when he came back, but I kept the hand wheel and the signature, and it was "Walter Scott." I had a great long ballad (ballad) in Sir Walter's aid hand of white at hand, so that I was not stranger to it. So, you see, gentlemen, I kept the grand secret
when it was a secret."

DIVIDING THE REWARD.
By Henry Stroude.
Copyright, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

Bertha looked up in dismay as the stranger entered. Kenton City was not so far ahead of a frontier town that holdups were absolutely unknown, and the sudden appearance of this brawny intruder did not suggest a peaceful errand.

Tremblingly she made change for the fifty dollar gold certificate he handed her after deliberately testing its genuineness and pushed the little pile of bills toward him.

"Aren't you rather young to be left in charge of a bank?" he asked as he deposited the change in his wallet. "I supposed that three or four men were the usual crew, not a little girl."

"I am not a little girl," she said indignantly. "I'm nineteen, and I guess this will help me out."

"This" was a huge revolver, and as she held it toward him he noticed that it trembled in her uncertain grasp. "I'm satisfied," he said, with a laugh. "Please put it down."

"I guess there's no one going to rob this bank even if there is only a girl in charge," she said defiantly. "Anyhow, father and the cashier will be back from lunch shortly."

"They lunch rather late here," was the significant retort as he glanced at the clock. "Three o'clock lunches are rather rare in Kenton City, are they not?"

Bertha's heart sank. So he must know that her father was ill in bed and that the cashier, the only other official of the bank, had gone over to the railroad. Perhaps he knew also that in the vaults were the payrolls of the two mines which made the First National a financial possibility.

"We were busy this morning," she stammered. "I guess pa will get back soon."

"I want to see him a moment," was the quiet response. "With your permission, I guess I'll wait."

"Perhaps," she suggested, "he may stay home. I don't know. He said

HE HAD WHIPPED OUT A REVOLVER AND HAD THE OTHER COVERED.

something this morning about wanting to see to some things about the house."

"I'll wait around for awhile," he said, with a smile. "I have plenty of time, and with pleasant company." He bowed courteously to Bertha.

"I can't put you out," she said, with a toss of her head.

"If I intrude," he suggested, "I can put myself out."

This was just what Bertha did not want. If he was planning to rob the vaults and was waiting until his confederates came up, there was a chance that some one might come in before they could help her escape him. He answered to the description of Butte Bill, who led a gang of cut-throats and whose picture adorned a handbill posted on the inner side of the wire screen. She hastened to make pleasant reply and presently she had forgotten the character of her visitor in the charm of his conversation.

Robber he might be, but he was certainly a most charming fellow and had traveled far. He soon had her so interested in his tales of "back east" that promised land of which she had heard so much and seen nothing at all, that she was sorry when at last the clock chimed 4 and she was forced to rouse herself and announce that it was time to close the doors.

"I've enjoyed our little visit immensely," he said, with a smile. "I am sorry that it must be interrupted. I hope to see you again. May I suggest that you be careful to see that the vaults are securely locked? You see, I hear that there is a gang of desperadoes in these parts, and it would be well not to put temptation in their way."

Bertha glanced at the "$5,000 Reward" on the circular and made up her mind. Butte must not be permitted to escape. She caught up the gun from its position on the shelf and slipped out of the cage. There was an opening in the counter near the front door, and just as she reached it she whipped out her gun.

"Put up your hands," she commanded. "You didn't know it, but I had your picture there on a handbill."

His hands had gone above his head at and, and now he towered over her, still smiling.

"There is some mistake," he said. "If you will kindly turn aside my coat you will find a detective's star there that should vouch for me."

He approached as though to permit her to carry out his request, but she retreated before him.

"Not much," she declared. "That would give you a splendid chance to overpower me. You keep your distance."

"But I can't hold my hands over my head all night," he pleaded. "What are you going to do with me?"

"Some one will come for me if I do not go home," she explained. "You won't have to wait for more than an hour."

The intruder groaned. "You don't suppose that I can keep my arms in the air that long, do you?" he demanded. "I'd rather have you shoot."

"I will if you come any closer," she warned. He stepped back, and for ten minutes he looked eagerly out of the door. Then he gave a cry, and with a sigh of relief Bertha turned her head to greet the newcomer.

For an instant she gasped, for the newcomer's arms went above his head promptly, and his revolver went clattering to the ground. In general appearance he was the double of her first visitor, though he lacked the frankness, expression and genial lines about the eyes.

His action reminded her of her captive, and she turned. To her surprise he had whipped out a revolver and had the other covered.

"Will you oblige me by feeling in my coat and taking out a pair of handkerchiefs you will find there?" he asked.

Bertha drew out the glistening bracelets and snapped them about the newcomer's wrists. Then the other man came forward, and with the heavy leather belt he wore about his waist he fastened the victim's feet.

"This is Butte Bill," he explained as he dragged his captive to a chair. "There are probably two others of the gang waiting outside. You stand over him and shoot him if he attempts to get away. I'll see if I can round up the others."

Depriving the bandit of his weapons, the stranger slipped out. Presently there was a sound of firing, then a silence. The girl and the man in the bank stirred uneasily. Bill was anxious as to the fate of his accomplices, and Bertha felt an unaccountable strong interest in the welfare of the stranger.

The minutes that sped by seemed like hours until, with a whoop, a crowd burst into the bank and relieved her of her guard duty. The stranger was in the van, a bloody handkerchief wrapped about his left hand and a thin stream of blood trickling down the side of his face.

"I'm not hurt," he said, with a laugh, as he saw her look of dismay—"just a scratch on the head and a ball through the palm."

"The sheriff can take care of these men," she said. "Come home with me and let me fix you up."

Rapidly she closed the vaults and led him down the street to the little home where her first aid to the injured had more than once gained her the title of "the little doctor."

Over the bandaging he told her that he was a railroad detective looking for some car thieves and that one of the Butte band had mistaken him for the leader and had uncovered the bank plot to him. He had seen a chance to earn the reward, and so he had sought an excuse for figuring around the bank until the desperado had put in an appearance.

"I did not want to alarm you," he explained, "so I said nothing, though I tried to hold my hands in the air much longer I should have had to speak in self defense."

"And I thought I was earning the reward," she laughed.

"You did," he insisted.

"Not at all," she contradicted.

"Then half," he pleaded.

She shook her head, and it was six weeks later before Grace Hallett's hand healed and they effected a compromise. Then they used the reward for the honeymoon.

The Value of an Opinion.
One of the most discouraging features in the case of the young man who stays at home is the fact that no matter what he may do, he seldom is given credit. If he takes his father's business and makes it go big, everybody gives the credit to the father. I know of one case in a small western city. A merchant who had been considered wealthy and prominent died and left everything to his son. The boy had been away from home for three years and was doing fairly well in a strange city without relying upon paternal assistance. He returned and took hold of the business. To his surprise, he found conditions rotten. Beyond the good will the assets scarcely would cover the liabilities. He dug in, worked desperately and in two years' time had things straightened out, and was on the highroad to prosperity. A sudden business collapse in the town, followed by a bank crash, caught him hard, and he was forced to assign. He paid dollar for dollar, yet today in that town they point him out as a man who wrecked his father's business.—Jonas Howard in Chicago Tribune.

Happily Answered.
One of the hardest things for a player to bear is when an audience laughs during a serious scene. Many a performer by his wit has been able to save a scene. An incident of this kind was experienced by the late Thomas Keene while playing Richard III. He had just finished exclaiming "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" when a young man in the audience called out, "Won't a donkey do?" and Mr. Keene quietly responded, "Yes; come up."

The "Pull" and the Job.
Business men are constantly being pestered by young men who seek positions through letters of recommendation, often in the form of personal requests from fellow business men. One may well question whether these letters have any great "pulling" power after all. The Saturday Evening Post tells of such an instance. After being very politely dismissed by several managers with the stereotyped expression that there was not a vacancy at present, the young man tore up the letters and went back to the place last visited.

"What can I do for you now?" the manager asked in an annoyed tone.

"Pardon me," said the young man, "but I've just torn up those letters. Could you give me a job on my own hook?"

The manager looked amused and said: "We need a young fellow to chip castings in the machine shop at $6 a week. If you like, you can have that until something better turns up."

"Yes, sir," replied the job hunter. "I'm ready now."

Queen Sophia and Bismarck.
Queen Sophia of the Netherlands, the first wife of King William III. of Holland, was too great a friend of Emperor Napoleon III., the Empress Eugenie and of France generally to take kindly to Bismarck. Before the big war of 1870 and probably some time after the Luxembourg squabble there was an international exhibition in Amsterdam, which the queen visited. She was conducted over the whole place by the committee, and as they came to a certain section one of the members said, "Now your majesty will see the greatest enemy of Germany." "Ah, Bismarck!" she cried, with some glee. The members stood aghast and never repeated this rash exclamation. The "greatest enemy" he had to exhibit was not, of course, Bismarck at all, but only a very much enlarged reproduction of either the phylloxera or the Colorado beetle, which at that time did a great deal of harm to German agriculture.—Westminster Gazette.

Placing the Responsibility.
For six months or more the druggist's assistant had occupied his leisure moments by writing verses for the village paper, in the "poets' corner" of which publication they appeared anonymously every Thursday, says the Youth's Companion. On opening his copy of the Weekly Bugle one morning, and turning first, as was his regular habit, to that particular corner, he was surprised and gratified beyond measure to see his name in full appended to his latest poetical outbreak.

He hastened to call at the office of the Bugle.

"Mr. Spiros," he said to the editor, "I want to thank you for signing my name to my poem in this week's paper. It encourages a fellow when he gets proper credit for his work."

"Oh, that's all right, Johnson," responded the editor. "We thought it was about time to place the responsibility for that poetry where it belonged."

His "Right" Name.
From queer names and descriptions of things there follow as a natural sequence queer names and descriptions of people. Among a number of rare instances is one quoted by Mr. Fox-Davies, the well known authority on nomenclature, from Blackwood's Magazine, of April, 1882. "In one of the Buchan fishing villages a stranger had occasion to call on a fisherman of the name of Alexander White. Meeting a girl, he asked, 'Can ye tell me fa' Sanney Fite Rives?' 'Tik Sanney Fite?' quoth she. 'Muckle Sanney Fite?' said he. 'Tik muckle Sanney Fite?' 'Muckle lang Sanney Fite?' 'Tik muckle lang Sanney Fite?' 'Muckle lang gleyed Sanney Fite?' shouted the expectorated man. 'Oh, it's Goup-the-Lit ye're seeking!' answered the girl, 'and fat the de'il for duna ye speer for the mob by his richt name at aince!'"

High Game and Fools.
"Never eat game high," said an antiquary. "People will tell you that high game is tenderer. What rot! Of course it is tenderer, but would you want your steak or your chop spoiled in order that it might be a little softer to the teeth? No, never! Highness in game is an anachronism, a relic of the past, a relic of the days of stage coaches. In those days it was impossible to deliver game to the cities fresh—transit was too slow. All game was high, and men ate it high because otherwise they couldn't eat it at all; hence to eat game high nowadays, when there is no necessity for it, is to be a fool."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Buddha's Six Essentials.
Buddha, who reformed the Hindoo religion more than 500 years before Christ, established for men six essentials of perfection—first, Knowledge, used to distinguish the true from the false; second, energy, which is used to fight against the evils of the flesh; third, purity; fourth, patience; fifth, charity (i. e., loving kindness); sixth, almsgiving.

A Hard Crack.
"Well," said he, anxious to make up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in this parcel?"

"Not very," replied his wife indifferently.

"Well, it's something for the one I love best in the world."

"Ah, I suppose it's those new collars you said you needed."—Tit-Bits.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address:

Paid in Full.

Two young ladies, evidently stenographers, were having an animated discussion while on their way to work the other morning in a Market street car. The discussion revolved around the question as to the best method to impress their respective employers as to the value of their services.

"Do you know," said the smaller of the two, "my former employer was the worst old granny. He could not spell the simplest words correctly, and he couldn't pronounce them. One day I thought I would impress him with the value of my services. He gave me a letter to typewrite, and I just went along and copied it as he handed it to me. Then I made a second copy with all the misspelled words corrected. With beaming countenance I handed him both copies."

"What did he do?" breathlessly asked her friend, forcing the conductor to hold his car so that she might alight at her corner and at the same time hear the answer.

"He fired me," was the reply.—Philadelphia Record.

Held Their Own.

A regiment of regulars was making a long, dusty march across the rolling prairie land of Montana during a recent summer. It was a hot, blistering day, and the men, longing for water and rest, were impatient to reach the next town. A rancher rode past. "Say, friend," called out one of the men, "how far is it to the next town?" "Oh, a matter of two miles or so, I reckon," called back the rancher. Another long hour dragged by, and another rancher was encountered. "How far to the next town?" the men asked him eagerly. "Oh, a good two miles." A weary half hour longer of marching, and then a third rancher. "Hey, how far's the next town?" "Not far," was the encouraging answer—"only about two miles." "Well," sighed an optimistic sergeant, "we're holdin' our own anyhow."

A Slight Mistake.

Chitto Harjo was pleading in Washington for the Indians' right to roam in nomad fashion, like their fathers. "They tell us to trust to fortune," Chitto Harjo said, "and then we'll get our rights. But we are tired of trusting to fortune. Fortune has used us Indians as it used the pale face instructor at the Indian school in 1897."

Chitto Harjo smiled and went on: "This instructor found a horseshoe, and to get good fortune put it under her pillow, along with her false teeth. In the morning in the hurry of dressing, she substituted the shoe for the teeth and did not discover her mistake till her affianced husband asked her in tones of horror at breakfast what was the matter with her mouth."

When Oregon Was in the Balance.
There is no boundary in the world of greater political importance than the forty-ninth parallel, which divides Canada from the United States. When this boundary was under discussion, the Pacific coast was almost inaccessible, and the ownership of Oregon, now a state of vast wealth, with opulent cities and a teeming population, was in the balance. The matter was settled by the report of Captain Temple, a brother of Lord Palmerston, who wrote to the admiralty "that the country was not worth a cuss because the salmon would not take a fly."—Manchester Chronicle.

The Only Way.

"I am writing an article," he said, "on 'The Way to Manage a Woman.'" "I suppose it will be a long one," she replied in a slightly scornful tone. "No," he answered, "it will be quite short. In fact, it will consist of only two words—'Don't try!'"—Birmingham Post.

Local Optionists Elated.

The local optionists are very much elated over the decision of the Court of Appeals on the unit law, and are preparing for an election in the county to be held some time in August.

Mr. J. S. Wilson, one of the leaders in the late local option fight, says the contest to be waged in the county as a whole would be along entirely different lines from that recently held in the city, that public speaking would be dispensed with and the matter would be handled along lines pursued in political contests. This means that the floaters will probably have a rich harvest just ahead of them.

In regard to the decision of the Court on the county unit law, County Attorney T. E. Moore, Jr., was asked what bearing it would have upon the situation in Paris, and after reading the entire decision, dictated the following opinion:

"The opinion of the Court of Appeals in the local option cases is very clear, as I understand it. Three can be no doubt, under the construction that this court has placed upon the local option law, that an election can always and at all times be held separately from the county unit law. In the first, second, third and fourth classes when an election has been called for the counties, including cities of said classes, and the result declared in said cities separately and distinctly from the results of county as a unit, provided that the required number of the citizens of such cities properly request that the election in such cities be held separately from the county."

"In other words, the citizens of Paris can by taking the proper steps, always ask and obtain a separate election when an election is called in Bourbon county, and have the result separately declared, and if the majority of such citizens of Paris vote 'wet' Paris will so remain, regardless of how the county may vote as a unit."

"Tipping" in Europe.

According to immemorial usage, European servants are entitled to tips as an assured part of their income. At the hotels the theory is that the landlord furnishes a guest a private room and the use of the public rooms, heat and light, food and dishes, but not menial service. For convenience he keeps at hand a corps of servants who will respond to the guest's summons, but at his expense. In old times travelers were attended by their own servants to wait on them. The modern custom echoes the ancient. The traveler no longer carries with him a retinue of servants, because he can hire temporarily those of the landlord. The customary fees are the payment. To avoid feeling is really to cheat the servants, who need all they can get, heaven knows. A chambermaid at the best hotels receives as wages only about $2 a month. Tipping servants in America is a regrettable imitation of the European custom without its resting on the reasonable basis of the foreign institutions.—Travel Magazine.

Told Who He Was.

The game warden of Colorado was walking out in the mountains on one occasion when he met a hunter with his gun. The official suggested that that ought to be a good country for hunting. "It certainly is," said the hunter proudly. "I killed one of the finest bucks yesterday I ever saw, and he weighed over two hundred." It was the season when deer may not be shot without subjecting the hunter to a heavy fine. "Well, that is a fine one," said the warden, "and do you know who you are talking to?" Being assured that he did not, the official said, "Why, I am the chief game warden of Colorado." The hunter was only taken aback for a moment, when he asked, "And do you know who you are talking to?" The warden didn't know.

"Well, sir," said the hunter, apparently much relieved, "you are talking to the biggest liar in the whole state of Colorado."—Kansas City Star.

The Primitive Violin.

In its primitive form the violin was a direct development of the lyre and monochord—the strings from the former and the elongated box, with its sound holes, finger board and movable bridge, from the latter. The history of the violin began with the invention of the bow some time before the thirteenth century, when the viole, or vielle, used by the troubadours, made its appearance. This instrument underwent many changes until the middle of the sixteenth century, when the true violin model appeared. The primitive violin had little or no contour. It was not until the thirteenth century that the vielle was scooped out at the waist. The corner blocks were added in the fifteenth century and are attributed to Germany. For nearly a century the sound holes were shifted all over the instrument before they were cut in their proper place and the bridge fixed between them.—Circle Magazine.

Two of a Kind.

A revival meeting was in progress, and Sister Jones was called upon for testimony. Being meek and humble, she said: "I do not feel as though I should stand here and give testimony. I have been a transgressor for a good many years and have only recently seen the light. I believe that my place is in a dark corner, behind the door." Brother Smith was next called upon for his testimony and, following the example set by Sister Jones, said: "I, too, have been a sinner for more than forty years, and I do not think it would be fitting for me to stand before this assembly as a model. I think my place is behind the door, in a dark corner, with Sister Jones." And he wondered why the meeting was convulsed with the laughter of those who came to pray.
